

Expired Certifications Process to Recertify

If you wish to resume officiating after a lapse in your certifications, you must do the following.

Registration

Bring your USA Swimming registration up to date. That includes current Background Check and Athlete Protection Training

Certification

For those individuals whose certification expired less than 3 years ago, they have to meet the recertification requirements for the position. (That means that they might have to work as an “apprentice” with a certified official until their own certification has been renewed.) If the certification expired more than 3 years ago, then the official may do half the required training sessions (but an evaluation is still required) and meet any additional requirements for the position. This may include taking the clinic/test for the position.
